

Thomas J. Griffin – Bio

Tom Griffin graduated from the University of Wisconsin with a Bachelor of Business Administration and a major in Marketing. He has 40+ years in technology sales, marketing and management, consulting and entrepreneurship and is currently a management consultant.

For the past 18 years, Tom focused his non-business career on Christian apologetics through various ministries. He is in his 14th year teaching scripture and apologetics for fifth grade Sunday School at his church, First Baptist Church in Peachtree City, Georgia, delivers apologetics training to middle school and high school youth, missions teams and adult Life groups and produces weekly apologetics addenda for 22 adult Bible study and discipleship classes.

Tom developed seven apologetics clubs on college campuses in Georgia for Ratio Christi, www.ratiochristi.org, the leading Christian apologetics organization with 200 discussion clubs internationally, co-produced Ratio Christi TV in 2017, a thrice a week apologetics program that has produced 250 shows. Currently, he serves as Operations Manager for Ratio Christi College Prep, an apologetics services program focused on training Christian high school youth in churches.

He attained his Master of Arts in Religion (MAR) and has a few classes remaining for Master of Arts in Apologetics (MAA). He has been a frequent speaker at the National Christian Conference on Apologetics in support of his books: a fictional geopolitical thriller titled The Last Premise, and Apologetics for Tweens, a unique work for 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th graders with over 50 weekly scriptural and apologetics lessons in each curriculum.

Tom is single, lives in Peachtree City, Georgia and has a 23 year old son Daniel, who is a graduate of Valdosta State in Georgia with a major in Theater Performance and minor in Voice Performance.
